

Abstract

A data storage device and a data storage method are disclosed which are suitable for storing large size data structures, such as multi-megabyte data files, at proximate locations on a data storage medium. The file space on the data storage medium is arranged in the form of logical cylinders containing logical rings, wherein each data file is stored in a separate logical ring.